Definition

A concept founded in the 1970's based on the belief that the emerging computer revolution would eliminate the need for paper in the office. In fact over the last several decades the use of paper has actually increased

Examples

The new computer systems promised that we would go paperless, sure I don't have to fill out that crazy T11 report any more, but now there are 12 NEW reports that are even worse than the T11. Ugh!

What Would Robin Williams Say?

Going paperless, haa, tell that to the credit card companies. I get five new credit card offers a day, and every time I apply they reject me, so what gives?
